STATE CAPITOL NEWS

By MELVIN LORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, April 23 —(UP)— For the first time in California's history official registration figures give the Democratic party a lead of more than 500,000 over the state's GOP tally.

As announced by the secretary of state's office, the figures for the May 5 presidential primary credited the Democrats with a registration of 1,687,288 voters as compared with 1.163,780 voters listed under the republican banner.

The final registration revealed a total of 2,964,336, or nearly 300,000 under the record of 3,140,114 establisehd for the Novemebr, 1934 election

The records showed that in the past four years the bourbon strength leaped from 847,264 to the record high number classified in that party for this year's presidential primary.

Selection of a site for the proposed Southern California state prison was postponed again by the special committee when protests were received from authorities of Orange and San Diego Counties against location of the prison in their counties.

The board explained that out of 100 sites offered them for the prison, one of the most favorable was located in Orange county and that the protests would necessitate furthur consideration of the proposals.

Appointment of Clarence A. Larkin, former captain of the guards, as warden of Folsom prison, brought to an end a political controversy which threatened to involve the entire state administration.

Prior to the final balloting which resulted in Larkin's appointment, the board had considered the naming of either Fred Escola, former United States marshal or Clyde Plummer, investigator for the Los Angeles county district attorney's office.

State officials have under consideration a proposal to print liquor tax stamps in the state printing plant here.

The proposal was made as a result of the controversy between the state board of equalization and the department of finance following the court ruling that the contract awarded the American Decalcomania company of Chicago was illegal.

Officials contended that state printing of stamps would save considerable money and provide work for state employes.

The California Toll Bridge authority approved the issuance of an additional $12,000,000 in revenue bonds to provide funds for completion of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge.

The bond issue will bring to a total of $55,650,000 the amount of bonds approved by the state for the bay structure. According to the department of public works the only additional funds needed will be $15,000,000 for the construction of railroad lines across the bridge.

Karl Kielhofer left on Friday for a business trip to San Francisco.

THREE CITATIONS LOSE LICENSE

SACRAMENTO April 23—(UP)—California motorists who receive tags from state highway patrolmen will automatically lose the privilege of operating cars in this state.

Putting into effect the most stringent regulation yet devised in an effort to curb traffic accidents, Ray Ingels, director of motor vehicles, has equipped the 600 patrolmen with new tags to issue motorists who violate the motor vehicle laws.

A filing system has been organized, and each citation will be registered with the individual driver's license. Upon receipt of the first citation, the department will notify the offending motorist that subsequent violations will result in revocation of his operating license. When a second tag has been issued, the motorist will be required to appear for a re-examination to demonstrate his ability to operate an automobile carefully and skilfully.

A third citation will result in automatic revocation of the license unless the driver can show valid extenuating circumstances. Or if the drive fails to heed the warning given after the second citation and refuses to appear for an examination, his license will be suspended.

"The purpose of this campaign is to weed out those who will not obey the traffic laws and those who, for some reason or other, are not competent to operate a motor car upon the state highways," Ingels said.

"The percentage of wilfully carless drivers probably is small. There are 3,000,000 licensed drivers in California. Thousands of motorists in the past did not take examinations before they obtained their licenses, and many others do not know the rules of the road.

"This new system will be enforced against everyone, regardless of their stations in life."

Citations also will be issued to drivers of vehicles that are obviously unsafe in the general drive to check the rising tide of traffic injuries and fatalities.

CHAMBER DISCUSSES SAFETY MEASURES

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held on Monday noon, several matters of interest along the lines of safer driving were discussed.

A request will be made by the Chamber of Commerce to the California Highway Patrol that a car which can be easily converted into an ambulance be provided to one of the traffic officers in this region. It was explained by one of the members that last summer the traffic officer who was stationed in the vicinity of Tallac, Lake Tahoe, drove a car while on patrol, that could be easily converted into an ambulance for use in emergency. There is a demand for ambulance service in this region during the summer months when traffic is heavy, and the Chamber of Commerce will request that such a car be given to one of the traffic officers.

The matter of a white line on the highway was also discussed and a request will be made that such a line be placed on the highway in this vicinity. It was the consensus of opinion that such a line would be of great help in eliminating accidents.

UNITED BOURBON VOTE URGED FOR MCADOO

Only Way Democrats Can Endorse Roosevelt. President Roosevelt's Nomination Seen On First Ballot.

Leaders of the Democratic party throughout California are calling upon the supporters of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to cast their ballots for the McAdoo delegation at the May 5th primary election.

The McAdoo delegation to the national convention, headed by United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, was selected personally by President Roosevelt and represents all groups within the Democratic Party. The only way the state's Democrats can endorse the president and his policies is to vote for the McAdoo ticket.

All indications are that President Roosevelt will be nominated on the first ballot at the convention in Philadelpha. If California should send a delegation pledged to Upton Sinclair or Congressman John McGroarty to the convention, the delegation selected would be compelled, under its pledge, to cast its first ballot for Sinclair or McGroarty. Sinclair and McGroarty are no doubt sincere when they state their delegations would vote for President Roosevelt on the second ballot, but it is extremely unlikely there will be a second ballot.

The nomination of the president on the first ballot with California casting her votes for him is desired, and to insure this the McAdoo ticket should be voted for.

Senator McAdoo will broadcast a message over the air within a few days to the voters of the state emphasizing the importance of going down the line for the president on the first ballot. The senator believes Roosevelt will be nominated on the first ballot, and that there will be no point in waiting for a second ballot before the full strength of the delegation is swung to him.

TOWNSEND INVESTIGATION FAVORED

Reported efforts to halt Congressional investigation of the Townsend plan won few supporters among California editors.

The inquiry, it was believed, should prove of service to both Townsend followers and the general public, if honestly and fairly conducted.

"The congressional inquiry," according to the Madera Tribune, "will cause no great harm to the sincere leaders of the movement, those who have sought and received no personal gain, but it will have a tendency to drive out those who are preying on innocent peoples who are being won over to that cause. Greatest gain will come to those members of the movement who are struggling to meet even the minor costs, who would be the victims of the human leeches where the latter gain a foothold in the organization's financial dealings."

"Viewed from the standpoint of a $1,000,000 a year business," notes the Stockton Record, "the salaries and emoluments to Townsend movement leaders revealed by the Washington investigation would be far from excessive. But when the funds are supplied in nickels, dimes and quarters by aged and aging persons in meager circumstances hopeful that the $200 a month pension miracle will be performed, the remuneration assumes a different hue. If there has been nothing unlawful or irregular on the part of the Townsend leaders, the financial gains of these men in whom several millions of followers have put so much faith are scarcely ethical."

"Whether it is wise to stop the investigation at this time," said the Hanford Daily Sentinel, "is a matter that is up to the Townsend people. Disagreeable facts have been bared. There may be some more. It would seem that those in honest command should be willing to purge the organization of all whose exposed ambition and cupidity have subjected it to criticism. Cleaning house thoroughly and putting it in order is due to the rank and file of honest folks in the movement. That they want the grafters and selfish leaders kicked out there can be no doubt."

"This old age pension plan, as promulgated," remarks the Chico Record, "is either the strangest political movement in American history, or the greatest pension loggy, according to the way you happen to look at it. Some critics may say it is both. It is well to have the whole truth about this movement set forth, if possible, before the national election campaign gets under way. The investigation should as far as possible present a complete picture of the movement, so fairly drawn that Townsendites as well as those who doubt the practicability of the plan will be satisfied with the presentation of facts."

"Avarice created the Townsend program and avarice is destroying it," declares the Los Angeles Evening News. The rank and file of Townsend members expected $200 when the movement had succeeded in electing enough congressmen to put the plan into effect. The leaders were more forehanded. From testimony adduced by the congressional committee it becomes apparent that they were taking their $200 a month—and a great deal more—as they went along, not content to wait until the membership and all other aged people received a fat pension."

"The thing to remember, after everything else is said and done," concludes the Santa Rosa Republican, "is that this Townsend movement did voice a great deal of pitiful fear and pathetic hope. Underneath it all there remain the conditions which gave the Townsend plan its initial momentum. These conditions will still exist, no matter how damaging the congressional investigation may prove. The Townsend plan, as a movement, may be crippled to the point of death; the fear and hopelessness that made millions of people embrace it are yet to be dealt with. And it will take more than a congressional investigation to set them right."

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WEEK

Another week, to observe this or that? Ah, no, the man says, there are too many "weeks"—so many that none of them means anything.

Ah, yes, but schools week, beginning Monday, is not "just another." The future of humankind is shaped in the schools. If ever the eternal problems are solved, it will be only because our schools have made better men of future generations than we ourselves have been.

Adults of today, plodding on throughout the year unaware of the future's birth, need this week to be made aware, to visit the schools and see and hear of their progress.

In California, Public Schools Week was born in 1920, when collapse threatened schools, and later the entire country copied the idea with its American Education Week observed in the fall. Public interest aroused by the "Week" helped greatly to dispel that crisis, and while the State today moves forward with an enducational system second to none, the future is not without clouds.

There is, for example, a proposal on the November ballot that threatens the sources of school revenues. It is the confiscatory land tax (single tax) which would repeal so many state levies that there would not be left in the general fund enough to grant the schools their annual $68,000,000. It would likewise soon dry up the land as a source of revenue, where school districts, through property taxes, get about $70,000,000 annually. If Public Schools Week serves to warn men of such dangers, then for this alone it is justified.

Go around to your school next week! After seeing the hope and enthusiasm of the youngsters you will come away with reawakened faith in the future of America, and, like as not, in yourself as well.

BALI MAKES A CULT OF BEAUTY

Everywhere I went in Bali, I found these so-called primitive people to be inherently artistic. For centuries they have made a cult of Beauty.

Whenever I watched workers in silver repousse, for instance, I noted that the designer worked entirely without a pattern, developing the motif for a flower or a leaf as he worked. How patterns ever came out to meet exactly at the end was more than I could understand. But there was never any over-lapping, or the least sign of clumsiness.

Most of their designs are original; I mean, you never see them in other countries. Take, for instance, the little bird-shaped drinking bowl which is used in temples and marketplaces. The whole idea of its shape is that it shall be hygienic. A native boy can pick up the bird-shaped cup, pour a stream of water into his uplifted mouth from the beaked spout without touching it with his lips.

Most of the craftsmen in silver or stone or wood work are born of families who have always worked in the same art. The young artisans start working with their parents when they are old enough to hold a tool in their hands. With the later skill of experience they achieve their own designs, which seem to grow under their fingers as if inspired.

The men do the stone work, and the wood carving of idols, and the beams and ornaments of the temples; the women are more skilful in making the gold and silver work, such as is seen in the markets of Kloengkoeng.

Everything a Balinese owns, even to the smallest betel-nut box or kris, is skillfully created by hand. Every temple, house, utensil, piece of cloth or jewellery is highly ornamented and decorated. This abundance of design must be inspired by the luxurious forests and flowers around them.

Every Balinese woman owns many batik kains; and at least one prada. These pradas are lengths of hand-woven silks, so heavily appliqued with gold and silver leaf designs that they are literally "worth their weight in gold." These pradas are kept in the family cupboards and reserved exclusively for use at temple ceremonies.

The art of writing first came to Bali from India many centuries ago. The temple books, or lontars are written in Sanscrit, the holy language of the Hindus, more than two thousand years old.

One day we made a visit to the "lontar man" and watched him cutting pages out of perfect palm leaves. He used only the finest greenish white leaves. With a thin stiletto, he cut the leaves into exact oblongs, about three inches wide by twenty-four inches long. With great skill he outlined the designs that were to illustrate the script. He used a sharp knifelike instrument that scratched the design into the page. The slightest mistake and the page was ruined. When he was satisfied with a page he sprinkled a black powder like graphite, over it, and smoothed this into the scratched lines, and the outlines became set and black, like ink. When the final work was completed the page was polished, and the writing and drawing became permanent. In a lontar, the pages are so arranged that one page is covered with drawings illustrating the page facing it.

When all the pages are ready, a hole is made through each end of the bundle and the leaves are corded together, so that you may turn them over like a book. Finally, they are enclosed between two covers made of thin slabs of sweet-scented wood like the tamarind. The covers are carved in delicate relief motifs and painted red and gold. The finished article is a book worthy of a museum.—Helen Eva Yates, in "Bali: Enchanted Isle."

Politically Speaking

By GEORGE E. HELMER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, April 23 —(UP)— California voters will have so many tax propositions laid before them on the November ballot they are likely to be somewhat confused unless they make a study of the various proposals they will be called upon to approve or defeat.

The latest movement along tax-changing now is aimed at the subsititution of a gross receipts tax for the sales and other present forms of taxation. Said to be sponsored in part by the motion picture industry as a means of doing away with the income tax and the threat of high property taxes, it would assess each individual and corporation receipt or transaction at a rate not to exceed one per cent.

If the proposed transactions tax is qualified for the ballot, the electorate will be asked to vote on it and the following other measures which already have been prepared:

A single tax which would repeal the sales tax and place the bulk of the burden on land.

Repeal of the income tax, which if approved would deprive the state of $18,000,000 or more biennially.

The chain store tax, passed by the legislature but held up by a referendum which forces it to a vote of the people.

A tax on oleomargarine, also passed by the legislature but held up by a referendum.

If the electorate votes "yes" right down the line on those five propositions, the state will lose the sales and income taxes as revenue sources and acquire a gross receipts tax, taxes on land, chain stores and butter substitutes.

State officials are flatly opposed to the single tax and the income tax repeal proposals as being potentially ruinous to California's credit structure. They are divided on the transactions tax, some favoring it and others opposing it as being too severe. A neutral attitude has been assumed in regard to the chain store and oleomargarine tax bills, officials being content to let the interests involved fight those out among themselves. The revenue would not be important enough to warrant state intervention.

In addition to the tax measures, there will be so many other propositions on the ballot that the average voter may be inclined to close his eyes and jab blindly with the rubber "X" stamp, officials feared.

The brief paragraphs which classify the propositions on the ballot are not sufficient to explain all salient features of each measure. In order to know what he is voting on, the voter will have to study the booklets which will be mailed with his sample ballot next October. And in view of the lack of interest exhibited in most ballot propositions in the past, it was considered doubtful whether many voters would take the trouble to learn the entire significance of each measure.

The more important proposals will be the objects of intensive campaigns, and anyone who reads a newspaper should know something of them before election day.

One of the outstanding peculiarities among the propositions developed in regard to one designed to change the name of the Railroad

TAHOE REGION NEWS

By Swanee

Jake Obexer of Homewood has this week engaged a crew of men to tear down the old grocery store and post office which has served Homewood residents for years past, to make way for a modern, and spacious two story structure which will not only offer the public every convenience but will bring to that section of the lake a first class grocery store; meat market; a branch of Loynd's Truckee Drug Store with soda fountain; a barber shop and beauty parlor and a new post office. The upstairs will house three modern apartments.

H. O. Anderson of Truckee is in charge of the building and the estimated cost is $10,000. Homewood residents will welcome this modern new localized shopping center and appreciate the progressive spirit which prompted it's erection.

The recent snow survey made by Bob Harkness and Arthur Delbo on webs discloses more snow and a much greater percentage of water content than for some time past. The record follows;

At Tahoe taken April 5th: average depth of snow 44.4 inches; water content, 18.0 inches; percent density, 40.4.

At head of Ward Creek, taken April 6th: average snow 153.8 inches; water content 65.3 inches; percent density 42.5.

At Rubicon taken March 28th: average snow 132.0 inches; water content 51.2 inches; percent density 38.8.

Fog enveloped the Tahoe district all day Friday and the rain which threatened on Monday arrived on Tuesday bringing .09 of an inch precipitation. This, while negligible, may assist in banishing the unwelcome banks of snow which still remain in some sections, although Brockway district is nearly bare. The lake level stands now at 6224.28 already much higher than last year's high mark of 6223.78.

Large and small streams are pouring down the mountain sides from all quarters as melting snow floods meadows and valleys. Wild flowers are pushing their way up out of the sun warmed ground almost over night and before long Tahoe will be donning her spring garb, a little late for Easter, but welcome nevertheless.

James Wilson who wintered with friends near Oroville returned to Tahoe for the summer on Monday. He is visiting the Charles Swansons.

Mr. and Mrs. William Oliver and children and Mrs. Etta Tyler returned to their Lake Forest homes on Monday after a motor trip to Oregon where they visited for several weeks with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Yeakel and son Rodney of Oakland are also occupying their cottage in Lake Forest, having spent the winter months in Carson and Oakland.

Mrs. Sally Frodenberg and two sons of Anchorage, Alaska, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Simmonds in town, grandparents of the young men who are are planning on remaining at Tahoe with their parents all summer.

Miss Beda Wicklander of Burlingame was house guest over the week end of Mrs. Kvistberg at her Tahoe Park home, which the later is making ready for summer renting.

Regain the lustre of dull, faded hair with Salakuta Oil Shampoo. Truckee Beauty Shop, Phone 72. adv

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Bliss were visitors in town on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Harkness entertained at their Lake Forest home over the week end Mr. Harkness' niece Mrs. C. H. Lemery, manager-owner of the Bowman Shop in Sacramento.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Adams and two sons of Loomis were guests of the Henry Wordens over the week end.

Dean Hull, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hull has returned to Tahoe for the summer following a visit in San Francsico.

Miss Celeste Planett motored up from Palm Springs on Sunday to remain for the summer season.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Anderson departed on Sunday for a leisurely vacation motor trip to the middle west. They plan to remain part of the time with Mr. Anderson's parents in Montana and will be gone for two weeks.

According to unconfirmed reports the Tavern will open up for alterations and refinishing within a short time. Manager Walter Rounsevel is expected in daily, and although June 5th has been mentioned as official opening date for guests, this cannot be definitely ascertained until his arrival. A busy season lies ahead with several conventions already booked. The bustle of activity around the Tavern is usually an indication that winter was departed and summer just around the corner.

The express office at the Tavern opened for official business on Monday and the first train of the season, manned with a push plow, is anticipated in on Wednesday. All of which is music to the ears of Tahoeites.

Around May 15th Sunday mail will again be in style and out going mail will not leave until 6:00 instead of at the present time of 4:30 P. M.

C. S. Martin, agent of the Sierra Pacific Power Company at Tahoe is a brother-in-law of Buzz Morrison, 29 well known aviator and sportsman of Reno who was killed in a plane crash on Tuesday in the bay district. The flier was well known here in the lake region and was the pilot who flew with Lee Allen some four years ago over the lake in the search for Mrs. Allen, who was believed to have lost her life when the boat capsized. Mr. and Mrs. Martin will attend the funeral services, which will be held in Reno.

Lee Orr returned to Tahoe on Friday for the summer after having spent the winter near Folsom.

Mrs. Florence Topp of Homewood has been visiting friends in San Jose and Modesto for two weeks past.

Captain Joe Sanders of Sacramento was a visitor at Tahoe on Saturday combining business with pleasure. While making an inspection tour he visited old friends and acquaintances. We halfway suspect he would very much like to return to his old stamping grounds despite the dignity and advantages of his new exalted position.

A. M. Henry of Tahoe who has been seriously ill at University of California Hospital in San Francisco is making slow but satisfactory recovery from his recent operation. He was allowed out of bed on Sunday last for the first time since his arrival at the hospital. He is not expected back to Tahoe for some time yet. Mrs. Henry who has been in San Francisco with friends to be near him, suffered uncomfortable bruises when she was struck by an automobile in the city.

Mrs. Rose Bennington of Lebanon, Oregon, daughter of the late Dave Tyler has written the following poem in memory of her father.

God Bless You, Papa Dear

For many years you've counselled us.
Explained things we should know.
So, now we ask you, Papa dear,
Why did you have to go?

You've been our idol, fetish, star;
Our beacon, bright and clear.
An empty ache is in our hearts
We miss you Papa dear.

Did you not know that we'd be lost
Without your guiding hand?
We're pleading with you, Papa dear,
Please make us understand.

You say that you have gone ahead
So we may have no fear?
You're waiting there to welcome us?
God bless you, Papa dear.

—Rose Bennington.

L. G. Baker of Sacramento, manager of Meeks Bay Cafe, arrived on Tuesday accompanied by Jack Smith of San Francisco. They will get the cafe in readiness to accommodate early tourists.

Mr. Baker narrowly escaped a serious accident on his way here when his car hit a large boulder, as he swerved to avoid hitting a car coming towards him. His car was badly damaged and it was necessary to tow it back to Truckee for repairs. The accident occurred on the Truckee Tahoe highway where several similiar accidents have happened.

COMFORT AT LOW COST!

SUMMER

When Mark Twain said everybody talked about the weather but nobody did anything about it...he didn't know about PALCO BARK. By installing a shielding blanket of it between the ceiling joists in your attic, it will make your home a cool retreat on hot stuffy days of summer. If building new, also put it in the walls between the studding. It keeps interiors as much as 15% cooler in summer.

WINTER

It's mighty convenient to let the modern thermostat do all the furnace work. But automatic heating does cost more to operate. Offset the increased cost by insulating with PALCO BARK and enjoy economy as well as convenience. A shielding blanket of it in the ceiling of your present home will stop most of the heat loss. It's easy to install and you'll be surprised at its moderate cost. Let us give you an estimate.

Egg Shortage Expected Despite Heavy Production

SACRAMENTO, April 23—(UP)—Despite an unusually heavy production of eggs on the Pacific Coast last year, a shortage of storage eggs appeared immiuent in view of increased shipments to eastern state, the federal state market news service reported.

"Of immediate concern is the matter of early spring production and supplies for storage. The severe cold weather and heavy snows so general throughout most of the country during February upset earlier calculations on fresh egg production for the latter part of the month and for March," a report said.

"Reports on farm production for March show the smallest average production per hen since records were started in 1935. Considerable improvement in production has, of course, occurred since that date,"

Due to the unfavorable conditions, the net increase in the stock of eggs in storage was unusually small, the report explained. Total cold storage holdings in the United States on April 1 amounted to 802,000 cases, compared with 1,508,000 cases a year ago, and with a five-year average for that date of 1,428,000 cases.

"It is quite possible, however, that the severe check to production during February may be entirely overcome before the close of the production season," the service reported.

"The production of baby chicks this year shows an increase over a year ago in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions. Chicks hatched in January and February increased 39.3 per cent over those hatched in the first two months of 1935.

"The live poultry markets generally were steady to firm, with prices slightly higher than a month ago. Reserve stocks of dressed poultry in storage continued lighter than previous years although reductions during March were less than average."

The report further pointed out that middle west receipts of eggs during March decreased 35 per cent while Pacific coast receipts increased

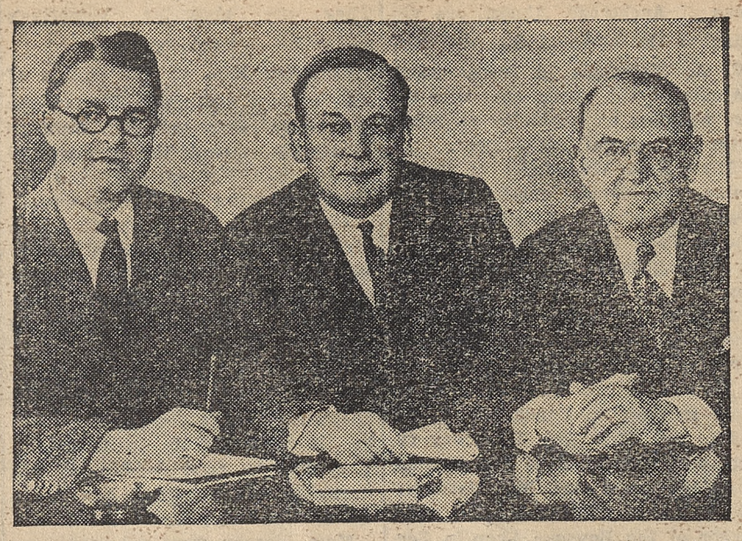
Surveying All New Deal Agencies



These three men, left to right, Dr. Luther H. Gulick of New York, Charles E. Merriam of Chicago and Louis Brownlow of Washington, D. C., have been named by President Roosevelt as a special committee of three which will survey the multitudinous New Deal agencies to ascertain which shall be scrapped, reduced or molded into the permanent framework of the government. Gulick was a director of the New York bureau of municipal research and of several similar bodies. Brownlow is a journalist and public administrator. Merriam is professor of political science at the University of Chicago.

New Methods Applied To Old Mining Art

SACRAMENTO, April 2 —(UP)— New science as it applies to the old art of placer mining is explained in a recent publication of the state division of mines.

Under the title of "New Technique applicable to the study of Placers," the publication shows that the winning of gold from ancient gravel deposits "may be aided by aerial photography and geophysical surveying, as well as by careful study of physiography and geology."

The processes and deposition of streams also are discussed, and placers are classified, epecially those involved in the gold reserves of the state.

Diet Of Nails Kills Cow On State Farm

SACRAMENTO, April 9 —(UP)— Mystery surrounding the death of a prize cow at Mendocino state hospital was solved by agriculture department veterinarians, who reported the animal died from effects of a wrong diet.

The cow had been ailing since Christmas. Efforts to diagnose the illness proved unavailing.

After death, it was discovered the animal had eaten sixteen penny nails one of which finally penetrated the heart.

Canary Causes Judge To Stop Court Hearing

SACRAMENTO April 9 —(UP)— Canaries evidently have little regard for the dignity of superior court proceedings.

One of the yellow-feathered birds flew through an open window into the court of Judge Malcom C. Glenn here while a damage suit was being heard. Perched on a chandelier, the bird chirped so loudly that conduct of the case was interrupted.

Judge Glenn finally recessed court until the baliff succeeded in chasing the unwelcome visitor out the window.

State Frowns Upon Ash Tray Purchases

SACRAMENTO, April 23 —(UP)— Cuspidors are all right. They're traditional. But ornamental ash trays? They're unnecessary and entirely too effeminate to appear as items on state expense sheets.

When the state capitol building was completed in 1870, cuspidors were among the first items of furniture purchased for the state house. They were essential in those days when tobacco stains decorated long mustaches and cigaret smoking was frowned upon as being too sissy for he-men.

Cuspidors, therefore, are traditional in the capitol. Hardly a desk lacks one in departments where male employes predominate.

But ash trays? Let the individual smokers furnish their own. There's no place on purchasing orders for such luxuries.

That, in effect, was the edict of Controller Ray L. Riley when he refused payment on a bill for $36.41— the cost of 10 smoking stands purchased for the board of directors' room at the Veterans Home at Yountville.

Approximately one person in every 100 in the Nnited States committed a crime in 1935.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Chirst from the dead." These words from I Peter comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, April 26, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Probation after Death." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept" (I Cor. 15: 12, 19-20).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Jesus' unchanged physical condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions; and this exaltation explained his ascension, and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive state beyond the grave" (p. 46).

Commission to the Public Service Commission. Originally, it was very innocent, but an inadvertent error caused it to assume major proportions by making it possible for one administration to control the entire commission. Its author, Assemblyman J. E. Frazier, announced he would combat his own bill—after he learned of the error.

An intensive campaign is expected to be centered upon the proposal to change the board of equalization into a tax commission and create a separate, appointive liquor commission. Since this proposition would be highly favorable to the present equalization board personnel, it will have the board's strong support. And its many possible ramifications may make it one of the outstanding items of interest on the ballot.

Few of the constitutional amendments approved by the legislature for submission to the people have any state wide appeal, but they will help clutter up a ballot crowded with other propositions and the names of candidates for president, congress, the legislature, superior courts and local offices.

"Rose of the Rancho"

Serialized by WALLACE WEST From the Paramount Picture of the same name.

CHAPTER X

Slowly the girl's eyes opened seeing Kearney, a faint smile came to her face. Then she remembered and struggled to her feet.

"Rosita—why didn't you tell me you were Carlos?" cried her lover.

"Never mind me," she gasped. "Kincaid's raiding the ranch."

"He's going there, is he?" said Kearney grimly. Then, as he picked up the girl and swung her into the saddle before him: "We'll stop him."

At first Rosita couldn't understand that Kearney was not an enemy and that he intended to take her side. But he was so gentle to her and abviously so angry at Kincaid that she soon realized that he was a friend.

"Not that way," she whispered as she clung tightly to him. "Take the trail over here. It's shorter."

By the time they reached the rancho the attack was beginning. Kearney managed to gallop his horse through the front gate just before it was shut and bolted. Then he set Rosita on her feet and took charge of the defense.

"Rosita," thundered Castro, as he caught sight of his daughter. "What are you doing in those clothes? You look like Carlos."

"I am Carlos," she answered sweetly as she hurried out to help Kearney with the defense. Castro stared in amazement at this cooing dove turned Amazon, then shook his head hopelessly.

At that moment there came the pounding of a rifle butt on the front gate. "Open up!" shouted Kincaid. "I'm taking over this place."

As if in answer to this demand, Kearney fired through the gate crying: "Wipe them out, men! They're asking for it. Take cover and shoot to kill!"

Guests of the party and the servants ran from every direction of the courtyard and patio to follow Kearney's advice. But many of them were unarmed and in spite of all he could do they could not be properly organized.

As the fusilade from outside increased window glass began crashing, women screamed. To add to the confusion Kincaid set his men to battering down the gate. Suddenly Dona Petrona swept down upon the hysterical women guests. Her black eyes were sparkling with excitement.

"Any women here who can shoot?

"I can," answered several in unison.

"Come with me," commanded the old lady. "We'll fire from the upstairs windows over the wall."

When the gate crashed inward it seemed that the defense of the rancho was over. Kincaid's men rushed in, shooting as they came. They were hotly received by the fire of the defenders. Some of the raider's men fell but others advanced and pushed the defenders back toward the patio.

The defense began to disintegrate at this point. Some of the guests left their posts. Rosita ran out among them and tried to encourage them.

Kincaid realized that he was gaining ground rapidly but he also saw that Rosita's desperate heroism was likely to cause him trouble. He ran toward her, branishing his revolver and waiting for an opportunity to take aim.

Forgetting all precaution, Kearney started to Rosita's rescue when he understood what was going on. Catching sight of the Federal Agent, Kincaid whirled and fired.

Confident that he had slain his enemy he then leaped forward to capture or kill Rosita.

Kearney fell. But he was not unconscious. With infinite effort he raised himself on one elbow, took careful aim and fired. Kincaid, whose big hands had just twined themselves in Rosita's hair, fell without a groan.

Seeing their leader dead, the land-grabber's men stopped their advance. At that moment shouts and shots were heard outside the rancho. The Vigilantes were coming.

"Carlos—The bandits—There's a hundred of them," shouted Kincaid's men as they broke and fled in all directions. But escape was not so simple. The Vigilantes had surrounded the house and shot down or captured the raiders as they emerged.

Kearney was unconscious by the time that Rosita reached his side. Oblivious to the turmoil about her, the girl knecled beside him and cradled his head in her arms.

"Senor Kearney —Jim—You mustn't die," she pleaded with tears in her eyes.

Late the next morning, after the doctor had gone, Rosita again leaned over Jim Kearney as he lay in bed, smothered in bandages.

"You're not going to die, are you, Senor Jim?" she begged.

At her words he stirred weakly and opened his eyes.

Rosita smiled with relief. She took a rose from behind her left ear, kissed it, bent down and put the rose between Kearney's fingers.

With great effort he reached up, put it behind her right ear and looked at her questioningly. She nodded happily and kissed him.

THE END.

Seed Crops of State Rapidly Gain Importance

SACRAMENTO, Ajril 23—(UP)—A new agricultural industry for California— that producing much of the seed with which other states produce local products—is gaining steadily in importance according to the state department of agriculture.

A survey made by the department revealed that the varied conditions of temperature, moisture and elevation make it possible to grow, somewhere in the state, nearly every plant which can be produced in any of the other 47 states.

"These same varied conditions also are favorable to the production of fine seed, and the dry weather which prevails over much of California at harvest time, reduces to a minimum the more difficult problems encountered in curing and threshing. The general weather conditions which prevail in California are very favorable for the storage of seed," the department report said.

"Hundreds of acres of land in the Sacramento valley, in Sonoma county near Cotati, in the Santa Clara valley from Gilroy to San Juan, and in the Salinas valley are devoted to the production of vegetable seed.

"In Santa Barbara, Ventura and Orange counties nearly all the country's Fordhook lima bean seed is produced.

"In the Lompac and Guadalup areas of Santa Barbara county a large acreage is devoted to the production of flower seed."

While much seed is exported outside the state, the production of field crop seed, such as grain, Sudan grass and alfalfa is largely for use within the state. Alfalfa seed leads in importance and value.

The department estimated that 5,000,000 pounds of alfalfa seed is planted annually in California, with Riverside, Contra Costa and Modoc counties the leading alfalfa seed producing counties. Some, however, is grown in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys and in Lassen, Siskiyou and Tehama counties.

Famous Old Property Resumes Operations

QUINCY, April 23 —(UP)— Resumption of activity recently at the Plumas Eureka mine near Johnsville placed in operation a gold mining property which during several decades following its discovery produced approximately $17,000,000, according to old-timers of the district.

The property covers 2,300 acres. More than 150,000 of low grade ore is available on old dumps, while valuable ledges have been discovered in virgin territory, it was reported.

Large Track Meet To Be Held At Davis

DAVIS, April 23 —(UP)— More than 500 athletes representing 40 California high schools will compete in the invitational track meet to be staged here April 18 as a feature of the twenty-seventh annual College of Agriculture Picnic Day.

In addition, some 600 high school students will participate in agricultural and stock judging contests.

The general public has been invited to the affair and visitors to the Aggies campus will be shown experimental and practical work being conducted in more than 200 agricultural research projects.

Pedestrians Should Use Intersections

SACRAMENTO April 23 —(UP)— California pedestrians should stay off the streets between intersections.

A check of accidents last year showed that 360 persons were killed on streets between intersections, as compared with 335 fatally injured crossing at intersections and 204 walking along highways, the state department of motor vehicles reported.

Indicating that the safety zone is not the safest place for pedestrians, the report revealed that 10 persons were killed and 80 injured standing in the zones.

A study of accident statistics shows that Saturday and Sunday are the most dangerous days for motor vehicle operation. Of the 33,729 accidents in 1935, a total of 6,421 occurred on Sundays and 6,012 on Saturdays.

The number of accidents over the week end was approximately on a ratio with the amount of traffic reported on the highways over Saturday and Sunday.

Cities Must Protect Their Shade Trees

SACRAMENTO, April 23 —(UP)— California cities must take better care of their famous shade trees if they are to continue to enjoy their beauty and shade.

This was the warning voiced by D. B. Mackie, supervisor of the entomological service of the state department of agriculture. He pointed out that the shade trees have been subjected to ever increasing obstacles such as paved streets, sidewalks, pipelines, leaky gas mains and the like.

"In view of these conditions," Mackie said, "it is not strange that when new pests are added the shade tree begins to show evidence of the uneven battle, and finally succumb.

"There are many shade trees, each with its pests, though it must be admitted that it took the elm leaf bettle to get many cities started on an adequate program of pest control. Taken by and large, the shade tree is the forgotten tree. California may boast of the luxuriance of its fruit orchards and citrus groves, yet when it comes to the care of its shade trees, it is well at the bottom of the list."

Large Citrus Crop Expected This Season

SACRAMENTO, April 23—(UP)— A citrus crop totaling 45,169,000 boxes is forecast this season for California by the federal state crop reporting service.

The service estimated the total state orange production at 34,,894,000 boxes as compared with 46,086,000 boxes last year. The grapefruit crop was listed at 2,275,000 boxes, compared with 2,167,000 boxes last year, and a drop from 10,506,000 to 8,000,000 boxes was foreseen for lemon growers.

The report pointed out that recent frosts did comparatively little damage to citrus fruits, although considerable loss was reported in deciduous fruit orchards.

SACRAMENTO April 23 —(UP)— Mules are more dangerous than airplanes, if fatality figures mean anything.

Dudley Steele, state chairman of the American Legion aviation committee, told members of the Sacramento branch of the National Aeronautics association that in 1935 more persons were kicked to death by mules than were killed in airplane accidents.
